

I support my independent ISP, even though it costs me more to do so. Why you ask? Because I used to be a broadband customer of a major telecom company and whenever there was a problem, I had nothing but frustrations. Waiting on hold, customer service employees always telling me something different, etc. With my independent ISP, who re-sells broadband from a major telco, I have excellent service.

The bottom line is, competition is healthy. Do not let major telecoms companies consolidate their near-monopoly into a total monopoly.

Thank you for listening.
